CONTENT AND ORGANISATION

Within the certificate programme, you will complete two courses.. ...

MODULE A: DESIGN OF TECHNOLOGY ENHANCED LEARNING (TEL) ENVIRONMENTS

This course provides an overview of the use of digital media in a variety of educational settings, designed to identify properties, strengths, and weaknesses of digital media in different learning contexts.

The basic psychological processes of perception, understanding, and learning with educational media will be introduced, with a focus on instructional design for technology enhanced learning environments and stand-alone learning objects.

Students will identify and explore a variety of digital learning materials and apply instruments to evaluate them. Topics will include collaborative learning technologies, open educational resources, the impact of media on learning outcomes, methods of evaluation, quality assurance, and project management of TEL initiatives.

MODULE B: INTERNATIONAL AND TRANSNATIONAL EDUCATIONAL ISSUES IN TEL

This course examines the development and current landscape of global open and distance education across developed and developing countries.

Key topics include cross-border partnerships, emerging business models, academic quality, cultural and linguistic opportunities and challenges, and innovative packaging of content.

Additionally, the module compares and contrasts key global professional and international associations, the resources these organisations offer, and their diverse roles in promoting internationalism, global trade, and the quality assurance and management of global educational services.

A major theme of the module comparing a variety of open and distance learning providers representing single and dual mode institutions and ODL universities / organisations from developed and developing countries. Private sector providers and government agencies are also covered in these analyses..
