How to learn Rhetoric

How to acquire the methods of rhetoric?

- ARS: command of rhetorical techniques
- IMITATIO: imitation of exemplary models
- EXERCITATIO: practice

Traditional Steps for Preparing a Speech

5 partes artis:

1. INVENTIO: (heuresis, invention, Erfindung)

a mnemonic verse from the 16th century: Who, what and where, by what help, and by whose: Why, how, and when, do many things disclose

2. DISPOSITIO (taxis, arrangement, Anordnung), cf. above 'structure'

- 3. ELOCUTIO (lexis, style, Stil)
- 4. MEMORIA (mneme, memorizing, Gedächtnis)
- 5. ACTIO or PRONUNTIATIO (hypokrisis, execution, Vortrag)

Plett, Heinrich F. Einführung in die rhetorische Textanalyse. Hamburg: Buske, 1973. 3-22, 102-105.

Rhetoric

A body of rules which serve in order to produce texts 'according to the rules of art' (either written or spoken)

Structure

A speech, according to the classical pattern, has four parts:

- 1. EXORDIUM (prooimion, introduction, Einleitung)
- 2. NARRATIO (diegesis, narration, Erzählung)
- 3. ARGUMENTATIO (pistis, argument, Beweis)
- 4. PERORATIO (epilogos, conclusion, Schluß)

Purpose of Rhetoric

The purpose of rhetoric is to persuade: intellectually (docere) and emotionally (delectare, movere).

- DOCERE: using LOGOS (appeal to reason)
- DELECTARE: using ETHOS (appeal to character)
- MOVERE: using PATHOS (appeal to emotion)

Stylistic Levels

(Note: one may find different stylistic levels in the same text; their use depends on the desired effect)

- GENUS HUMILE: low style, plain style, close to everyday speech, possibly even colloquial. Characteristics: simple, mainly conventional usage, little 'ornament', few figures of speech
- GENUS MEDIUM or MIXTUM: middle or mixed style, often used in learned dissertations, designed to "delight" rather than "move" the audience; tends to be used in (some) poetry, in comedy etc. Characteristics: ample use of tropes, embellishments
- GENUS GRANDE or GRAVE or SUBLIME: high or sublime style, solemn, emphatic, passionate, designed to move the audience, tends to be used in tragedies, eulogies, heroic epics etc. Characteristics: complex syntax, unconventional word order, unconventional figures of speech, rhythmicized language
